

ORDERS

call 800-621-2736

fax 800-621-8476

Join Our Mailing List

enter e-mail

send

CONTACT US

FACEBOOK

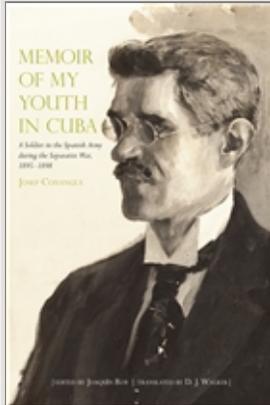

CATALOG ▶

NEWS / EVENTS ▶

MEDIA ROOM ▶

JOURNALS

SUPPORT UAP

Memoir of My Youth in Cuba

A Soldier in the Spanish Army during the Separatist War, 1895–1898

by Josep Conangla

Edited by Joaquín Roy

Quality Paper2017. 208 pp.
5 B&W figures
978-0-8173-5892-1Price: $34.95^s*Add to cart*E Book2017. 208 pp.
5 B&W figures
978-0-8173-9076-1Price: $34.95^d*Add to cart*Atlantic Crossings Series*ABOUT THE BOOK

Memoir of My Youth in Cuba: A Soldier in the Spanish Army during the Separatist War, 1895–1898 is a translation of the memoir Memorias de mi juventud en Cuba: Un soldado del ejército español en la guerra separatista (1895–1898) by Josep Conangla. The English edition is based on the Spanish version edited by Joaquín Roy, who found the memoir and was given access to the Conangla family archives. Conangla's memoir, now available in English, is an important addition to the accounts of Spanish and Cuban soldiers who served in Cuba's second War of Independence.

Spaniard Josep Conangla was conscripted at the age of twenty and sent to Cuba. In the course of his time there, he reaffirmed his pacifism and support of Cuban independence. The young man was a believer who unflinchingly connected his view of events to the Christian humanitarianism on which he prided himself. Conangla's advanced education and the influence of well-placed friends facilitated his assignment to safe bureaucratic positions during the war, ensuring that he would not see combat. From his privileged position, he was a keen observer of his surroundings. He described some of the decisions he made—which at times put him at odds with the military bureaucracy he served—along with what he saw as the consequences of General Valeriano Weyler's decree mandating the reconcentración, an early version of concentration camps. What Conangla saw fueled his revulsion at the collusion of the Spanish state and its state-sponsored religion in that policy. "Red Mass," published six years after the War of Independence and included in his memoir, is a vivid expression in verse of his abhorrence.

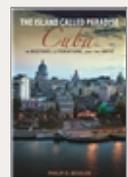

Conangla's recollections of the contacts between Spaniards and Cubans in the areas to which he was assigned reveal his ability to forge friendships even with Creole opponents of the insurrection. As an aspiring poet and writer, Conangla included material on fellow writers, Cuban and Spanish, who managed to meet and exchange ideas despite their circumstances. His accounts of the Spanish defeat, the scene in Havana around the end of the war, along with his return to Spain, are stirring.

AUTHORS / EDITORS

Josep Conangla (b. 1875, Montblanc, Spain; d. 1965, Havana, Cuba) was a twenty-year-old law student when he was conscripted to serve in the Cuban War of Independence (1895–1898). He evaded active duty because of connections in Spain but worked in an infirmary, among other duties, and was a keen observer of his milieu and of important events, including the sinking of the USS Maine. Repatriated to Spain in 1898, Conangla became a journalist and enjoyed some success as a poet. In 1905 he returned to Cuba to live and write. He was a harsh critic of Spanish colonialism in Cuba and elsewhere and an advocate of Cuban and later Catalan independence. Conangla completed his memoir in 1958.

Also of InterestOn Captivityby Manuel Ciges Aparicio
Edited by Dolores J. WalkerColonizing Paradise

by Jefferson Dillman

Rise of Constitutional Government in the Iberian PeninsulaA Edited by Scott Eastman, Natalia Sobrevilla PereaIsland Called Paradise

by Philip D. Beidler

Joaquín Roy is the Jean Monnet Professor of European Integration, the director of the University of Miami European Union Center, and a codirector of the Miami-Florida European Union Center of Excellence. He is the author or coauthor of many works, including The Cuban Revolution (1959–2009): Relations with Spain, the European Union, and the United States and Historical Dictionary of the European Union.

D. J. Walker is a professor emerita at the University of New Orleans. She translated On Captivity: A Spanish Soldier's Experience in a Havana Prison, 1896–1898 and is the author of Spanish Women and the Colonial Wars of the 1890s.

REVIEWS

"Memoir of My Youth in Cuba, an antiwar statement, has a universal resonance."
—Teresa Prados-Torreira, author of Mambisas: Rebel Women in Nineteenth-Century Cuba

HOMESITE MAPUNIVERSITY OF ALABAMADISCLAIMERMEMBER AAUP